DOROTHY DIX

Smart-Alecky Husband

Dear Miss Dix: I have been married for three months and every day of my married life my husband has held me up for ridicule on account of my weight. No one else seems to think I am too fat, as I only weigh 138 lbs. I have dieted, taken exercises and done everything else I could to slim down, without results. However, my weight seems to be on my husband's mind, for he criticizes me continually and we never get in a crowd that he doesn't call everybody's attention to how fat I am.

He will warn me to be cautious how I sit down for I might break the chair. Or he will say that I would sink a ship if I stepped on my nerves. I don't just plain "Fatty" in my nerves. I don't know what to do. Can you suggest something, as I am at a loss as to how to keep my husband from making fun of me?

WORRIED WIFE
Answer: Your husband must be one of the Simple Simon men who think they are being witty when they are just being stupid. They are show-offs who are trying to call attention to themselves and haven't enough intelligence to realize that they are making public spectacles of themselves.

Before you were married, your husband never thought of you as the fat woman in the circus. On the contrary, he couldn't praise your sylph-like figure enough, and, as a matter of fact, still thinks that you could be a Powers model in a fashion show. When he ridicules you he doesn't mean a word of it. He is just trying to be funny.

One in Every Family
Nearly every family is afflicted with one of these smart guys whose whole conversational repertoire consists in calling a cripple "Hip-pty Joe" or asking an old maid when she is going to be married. They think that show how brilliant they are, but everyone else thinks what cads they are.

Any man who makes his wife the stalking-horse of his poor jokes deserves to have something with boiling oil in it done to him.

Dear Miss Dix: I am a financially independent widow with two children. Seven months ago my sister died, leaving three children, so I moved into my brother-in-law's home with my family in order that I could look after his children. Our problem is this: My brother-in-law is soon to be transferred to another city and wants me to go with him. The only thing that stands in our way is that I might cause gossip if we were not married. We have talked this over and have come to the conclusion that the sensible thing for us to do is to get married, although we are not sentimentally in love. We have the same hobbies. We enjoy each other's companionship. He loves my children as much as he does his own and I feel the same way about his children. We both agree that my children need a father and his children need a mother. What do you think we should do?

TWO UNCERTAIN PEOPLE
Answer: Getting married is a problem that you will have to settle for yourselves, but to an innocent bystander it looks as if it were a match made in Heaven. I am sure that if the dead could know what happens in this sad old world of ours, they would rejoice that their children never would have to go through the ordeal of the step-relationship.

Dear Miss Dix: Can a fellow love the opposite sex without showing it in some affectionate way? Wouldn't a guy put his arms around a girl, if he loved her, without her asking him to do so? Would he not tell her he loved her without her having to do all the courting? What do you think of a man who goes with a girl for years without discussing the future, or telling her how he feels about her, and who never

Dutch Harrison Sets Course Record

Virginia Beach, Va., April 15 — (AP)—What has happened to Bobby Locke's golf game?

Bobby Locke, the transplanted South African, seemed to choke on the sandwich he was eating. Finally, he wheeled around and replied:

"Nothing. Nothing has happened to Bobby Locke's golf game."

Locke kept munching on that sandwich. Seconds ticked away in silence. Then, he spoke again:

"I can't say that something's happening. The scores I got last year.
Why, I won at Chicago, took second in the Tam O'Shanter, the Goodall, and at Washington. But I may have been a bit out of condition to my game just because I haven't been doing as well this season."

"One thing I can say, my putting maybe hasn't been as good as it used to be. There's the changeover to this bigger ball, too. You know I played the small ball use in South Africa for six months. I am finding it hard to get back to this large ball again."

Locke said most of his trouble was that "the rest of the boys are just playing better."

"Look what that Harrison did out there yesterday—shot a seven under par 62. It hasn't ever been done before—not on this course."

E. J. (Dutch) Harrison is 39-year-old Rock, whose 62 record for Little petitive course record for the par 60, layout of the Cavalier Yacht and Country club.

The 18-hole fancy round came in the $10,000 Cavalier specialists golf tournament.

This tuneup for today's initial 18 holes of a 54-hole medal test saw 12 of 2 participating golf professionals shorter par. The final 36 holes will be Sunday.

Deadlocked for second place with 64's were Jimmy Demaret of Ojai, Calif.; Dick Metz, the host pro, and Johnny Palmer, of Bad

ROGER THE LODGER

By Elizabeth R. Roberts

COPYRIGHT BY GREENBERG, PUBLISHER DISTRIBUTED BY NEA SERVICE, INC.

The Story: Mr. and Mrs. Roberts take in problems with their lodgers when they attempt to relieve the wartime housing shortage in Great Falls, Mont. Roger, who uses the Roberts' possessions as if they were his own, is a big problem, but recently Captain Dick Morgan, his wife Betty and their baby, who live in the maid's apartment, have created a problem with their assortment of baby sitters.

I asked Betty to instruct her sitters to stay out of my part of the house, Betty sighed, said she'd get a new girl. The implication was that none who had worked for her — and me — would be willing to return to the job. She hinted that possibly I'd find it more to my liking to sit with the baby myself.

"I'd love to," I agreed, "when I'm home, anyway. But I can't make any promises to stay home, because sometimes I change my plans on the spur of the moment."

I've got to be in the office, I said, annoyed at being on the defensive. "But when I'm settled for the night, or lashed to the washing machine, I'll be delighted to take care of Caroline."

That night, I set a new lat, and she didn't have dancing parties. But she must have had a tapeworm. The refrigerator door banged on the hour and on the half hour like a faithful old clock. The sixth or so time it banged, I couldn't control myself.
I took off for the kitchen.

My kitchen. Standing by the sink, leaning over it so the juice wouldn't run down her front, was the sitter, eating a slice of watermelon.

I opened and shut my mouth a few times, priming the pump, before any words came. "Why are you eating out of my refrigerator?"

"I'm hungry," she replied accusingly.

"Didn't Mrs. Morgan tell you what to have for your lunch?"

"Sure. I ate that."

"This is my icebox. You're not supposed to be in my kitchen at all."

"There's nothing left downstairs to eat," she snapped back.

I asked Betty to explain to her sitters that they mustn't use my kitchen nor help themselves to my food.

"Oh, dear," she cried. "I don't believe I'll ever be able to find a sitter to suit you. I guess I'll have to stay home all the time myself."

"She looked at me as though I were deliberately making trouble for her."

"Surely there must be someone you can make understand that this is a two-family house now and that our half is not for her to make use of."

"Well, I'll try," Betty said, "but I'm about out of names."

She found one more girl to put up with me — a child of about 13.
She arrived alone, but within a matter of minutes had spirited three little companions into the basement. I saw them sink up the garden walk, piping all the windows on that side of the house, but though they looked cautiously they did not see me behind a Venetian blind. They tiptoed down the basement stairs quiet as mice.

The house began to rock on its foundation. I allowed four or five tremors to pass unnoticed and then proceeded to the basement. The children were making so much noise they didn't hear me as I called to them, and when I did find them in the laundry or sitting room, I continued to the bedroom where I discovered them all in the closet. They screamed at my unannounced appearance.

"Girls, what are you up to?"
I asked.

They giggled. One was clutching a large book in her arms. I looked at it. It was Betty's scrapbook.

"Where did you get this?" I asked.

"Off the top shelf," one answered.

I looked at the height of the shelf and the size of the girls and wondered aloud how they had got the book down.

"Oh, we've been jumping for it, Mazie," indicating a wiry child, "jumped the highest. She reached it."

Leaving out the ethics of their helping themselves to things on top shelves, I suggested they might have got it more easily and

Provocative All Set for the Big Derby

Lexington, Ky., April 15 —(UP)— Clifford Moore's Old Rockport, winner of the Santa Anita derby and a standout nominee for next month's Kentucky Derby, was entered in today's Alec Gordon purse at Keneland.

Joining the California flash in the sixfurlong test were Johns Joy, Provocative and Irish Sun.
The latter is the only horse not nominated for the Kentucky Derby.

Meanwhile, there other derby hopefuls—Wine List, Rockwood and Palestinar—were matched in the market wise purse at New York's Jamaica course.

NOTICE

We are having trouble with our No. 1 water well. This well must be pumped to maintain a safe supply of water in the reservoirs.
This well is pumping sand which results in a discoloration of the water. All the water is sterile and is safe for domestic consumption.
We are taking steps to correct this situation, although it may be some time before the condition is cleared up.
